Words Of Hope

Fifty years ago on July 20, 1969, many wide-eyed, faces were mesmerized by events unfolding on small black and white TV screens. They were witnesses to one of the most incredible feats of human history - a man was walking on the moon! What was once considered impossible was now reality. Neil Armstrong's words broadcast to Earth spoke to the triumph in human achievement. In a private moment, inside the Eagle module positioned on the Sea of Tranquility, Buzz Aldrin acknowledged the Maker of the Heavens, recited the words of Jesus from John 15:5 and took communion. "Whoever remains in me and I in him will bear much fruit. For you can do nothing without me." I believe that living an extraordinary life is God's desire for each of us. We have a purpose even greater than walking on the Moon when we follow the footsteps of Jesus in bringing life-saving hope and healing to desolate people.
